Bringing War Studies into the 21st Century

Thursday, 18 June 2020 12:00 (1h 30m)

This panel seeks to engage with the war studies tradition, which has traditionally formed around multidisciplinary research into the causes, effects, and ethics of organized violence. It does so by bringing together papers that focus on the technological, political, strategic, sociological, ethical, and legal debates surrounding the phenomenon of organized violence. In doing so, it seeks to illustrate not only the breadth of the war studies tradition in the 21st century, but the conceptual links between these different issue-areas that create the field.
