

Contribution ID: 755

Type: Panel

The Handbook of Global Politics in the 22nd century

Thursday, 18 June 2020 15:00 (1h 30m)

The 'Handbook of Global Politics in the 22nd century' (HGP22) is an experimental collective project, written in a futur antérieur style. HGP22 explores a range of theoretical perspectives and approaches to 'write the future' of global politics, from the perspective of the year 2120.

Panel participants are all part of the HGP22 project, including the editors.

HGP22 mirrors the format and style of existing handbooks, but it does so through exploring the horizon of the possible: combining concise outlines and discussions of theories, structures, processes and core issues in international relations with a conjectural investigation of how these might play out over the course of the next century. The contributors offer plausible analytical accounts that extrapolate from the existing state of global politics, but also narratives of the 'not yet'.

Track Classification: Historical Sociology and International Relations Working Group