Narratives, Discourses and Developments in Contemporary Russian Security

Wednesday, 15 June 2022 09:00 (1h 30m)

This panel examines contemporary Russian discourse and narratives on security, ranging from an analysis of Russia and China as global security actors, to Russian narratives on security in and around Afghanistan and Russian approaches to conflict management using the example of Nagorno-Karabakh. Further papers discuss the centrality of democratization and human rights discourses in the US-Russia security relationship and the militarization of Russian society.
