‘Un-Siloing’ Nuclear Weapons in an Age of Pandemic, Climate Crisis and Global Injustice: On the Need to Connect Existential Threats

Wednesday, 15 June 2022 09:00 (1h 30m)

This roundtable will bring together participants working on the connections between the challenges of ‘surviving’ a nuclear armed world and other challenges of survival, including climate and global health. How can we research, teach and practice ways of addressing the complex intersections of challenges to our survival? In what ways does this survivalist thinking enable and/or limit political possibilities? This roundtable will bring discussions on gendered militarism, inequality, covid, climate and geoengineering to bear on the potential for reimagining our (nuclear) future.
