Rethinking research practices in IR

Friday, 17 June 2022 15:00 (1h 30m)

Since the establishment of IR as an academic field, research methods and perspectives used by scholars to study and better understand the world we live in have been developed and evolved in very different directions. This panel proposes to shed some new light on the processes of studying IR. More precisely, it proposes to revisit and interrogate some of the mostly used methods and research instruments by students and scholars as to improve research practices.
