Constructing roles and narratives in interstate relations

Friday, 17 June 2022 09:00 (1h 30m)

Studying foreign policies often requires to define oneself compared and in relation to the other. This social construction of relations led to the analysis of IR through the lenses of identity definition, status recognition, role attribution and self positioning in status hierarchies. This panel offers to look at such interactions by looking at recent developments in interstate relations.
