Polish International Studies Association: The role of the main actors in the Indo – Pacific regional Order. Neoliberal perspective

Tuesday, 14 June 2022 10:45 (1h 30m)

The objective of the panel is to reconstruct the assumptions of strategies of the most important individual and collective actors for the Indo-Pacific region. The concept of the Indo-Pacific region emerged in political and scientific discourse as early as 2007, but it was only during the Donald Trump presidency that the United States for the first time presented the approach to this region, known as the Indo-Pacific strategy. Soon after, other powers did the same. All these strategies are more competitive than complementary. Therefore, it justifies the need to compare them in order to answer the question about the shape of the regional order. The actors' regional strategies will be framed using the terms and categories characteristic for neoliberal institutionalism.
