The 'World's Policeman' No More? - Changes and Continuities in US National Security

Friday, 23 June 2023 09:00 (1h 30m)

This panel examines the transition of US national security from a predominant focus on counter-terrorism and military interventions over the last twenty years towards strategic rivalry and great power competition. It investigates US public opinion and a growing sentiment of non-interventionism, as well as enduring patterns of counterterrorism policy and remote warfare within the larger context of risk management and US national interests.
