Reframing British Politics: Lessons from International Relations

Wednesday, 5 June 2024 09:00 (1h 30m)

In this roundtable speakers will reflect on some of the ongoing silences and marginalisations in the study of British Politics around questions of race, colonialism, migration, gender, sexuality, and disability as well as to consider what lessons (if any) can be drawn from International Relations in centering these questions. We consider the particular contributions that feminist, queer, post- and decolonial IR could make in building a more inclusive and critical study of the UK in a global context.
