

Contribution ID: 1594

Type: not specified

Conceptualising AI in Global Society

Thursday, 6 June 2024 09:00 (1h 30m)

One of the key areas for reflection in this years conference will be on the new possibilities and risks arise from the apparently unparalleled capacity of new technologies under the umbrella terminology of 'AI'. From advanced prediction and democratisation, to questions about the role of AI in altering or reproducing logics of coloniality, the papers in this panel theorise the major questions of the moment. What do we really mean by AI in the context of the international? What should, or more importantly, shouldn't it be used for? How does it change our understanding of power? These areas will be explored in a variety of different approaches and theory perspectives.

Track Classification: International Studies and Emerging Technologies Working Group