Indebtedness as a political condition

Wednesday, 18 June 2025 13:15 (1h 30m)

Indebtedness is a significant political condition at multiple levels of the international system, producing multiple vulnerabilities, asymmetries, forms of coercion and the undermining of democratic governance structures. The papers in this panel examine these multiple facets of the condition of indebtedness, from race to austerity to developmental transformation, challenging International Relations to more closely examine the material processes conditioning international political life.
