Narrating Security: Security narratives in policy and practice

Wednesday 18 June 2025 16:45 (1h 30m)

This panel examines the role of narratives in shaping security policy and practice. Understanding security beyond the material, the panel explores the stories and discourses that frame threats, shape national security agendas and influence behaviour. Drawing examples from a range of narrative sites, including state and non-state actors, this panel assesses the power of language, and its ability to shape policymaking and security practices.
