Security cooperation and alliances in uncertain times

Wednesday 3 June 2026 15:00 (1h 30m)

This panel considers the way governments in different settings are responding to the challenge of navigating security alliances and multilateral cooperation in uncertain times. As the world moves into a more multipolar order, many states are actively rethinking their role and relationships within regional and global configurations. This panel explores these dynamics, paying particular attention to the way smaller states are seeking to navigate an uncertain global environment. In doing so, the panel advances debates on the modes, dynamics, and potential for cooperation within an increasingly uncertain global order.
