Revisiting Gulf Politics Amid Shifting Regional (In)Securities

Wednesday 3 June 2026 15:00 (1h 30m)

This roundtable aims to explore the transformations in Gulf affairs through the intersecting lenses of domestic, regional, and global politics. Against the backdrop of shifting regional insecurities in the broader Middle East, the discussion brings together diverse perspectives on the evolving political, economic, and social dynamics of the Arab Gulf monarchies.

Adopting a multilayered approach, the roundtable will address developments in international relations, domestic governance, energy politics, and social change in the Gulf. As an annual scholarly recap, it seeks to provide a comprehensive platform for critical reflection on the past year's key trends and trajectories in Gulf politics and their implications for regional order and stability.
